Message from THE DRPS BOARD CHAIR

On behalf of the Durham Regional Police Services Board, I am honoured to present the 2020 Annual Report.

As the global pandemic swept across Canada and into our community in the late winter of 2020, the extraordinary members of the Durham Regional Police Service rose to previously unimagined challenges. As most citizens properly self-isolated in the safety of their homes, the 1,200 members of the Service continued to work tirelessly every day to keep our community safe and secure, every day surrounded by the threat of the COVID virus, every day risking their own health and the wellbeing of their families to serve the residents of Durham. Throughout it all, they carried out their duties with dedication, professionalism and compassion despite so many other challenges including the chorus of voices across North America calling for change to tackle systemic racism in policing.

The pandemic threatened to sideswipe the new three-year Strategic Plan which had just been approved for 2020-2022. But the Board and the Service adapted quickly and effectively to ensure the continuity of business and the continuing safety and wellbeing of members and the community. At the same time, the glare of public focus on policing and racism highlighted the importance of making progress in addressing systemic racism across our social institutions. The Board and the Service responded by setting in motion a number of plans and initiatives to enhance equity and inclusion practices, both in the delivery of services to the community and internally within the organization itself. This will continue to be a critical priority as we move forward.

Despite so many daunting challenges and changes, the commitments to action in the new Strategic Plan were pursued rigorously. Progress was made to strengthen community trust and confidence, foster a more positive workplace culture, and to provide efficient, evidence-based policing services. The Annual Report provides a number of examples of this important work.

Finally, 2020 was a year of internal operational transitions. Chief Paul Martin retired, and was replaced on an interim basis by former Deputy Chief Todd Rollauer. In turn, the Board selected Superintendent Joseph Maiorano to fill the deputy's position during the transition period. The Board wishes to thank Chief Martin for his extraordinary service and leadership over the past 30 years, and we welcome our new senior leaders.

The Board commends all DRPS members. Despite the challenging environment of 2020, their courage, competence and professionalism have been on full display every day in all corners of the region. Their contribution to the Durham community continues to define the best in public service.

Message from THE CHIEF

The year 2020 will be remembered for the challenges of the pandemic and the resilience of the global community. Here in Durham, the pandemic brought new and often-changing public health guidelines as we tried to slow the spread of COVID-19. Within the Durham Regional Police Service, our members have stepped up to adapt and address these challenging times, and I would like to commend everyone, from every role and rank, for your hard work and dedication to community safety.

Within the community, it was inspiring to see residents helping one another to bolster their physical and mental wellbeing through the tough months of sickness and lockdowns. From drive-by birthday celebrations to outpouring of support to front-line heroes, the residents of Durham Region rallied together, albeit most at a safe distance from one another.

Our Emergency Operations Centre was launched in March 2020 to coordinate our response to the pandemic through public education and enforcement of new regulations, and myriad changes in operations needed to keep our community and our members safe. Despite all the changes in protocols and constantly changing regulations, our officers and staff remained committed and focused on their most important job of ensuring the safety and wellbeing of the community.

Acknowledging that systemic racism exists throughout our society, my predecessor Chief Paul Martin initiated a four-point plan to address systemic barriers in our police Service. Our leadership continues to drive this plan forward and have the tough conversations needed to make real and effective change as we strive for inclusivity.

Crime rates declined for most categories of offences during the pandemic. For example, people staying home and off the roads likely contributed to a drop in crimes such as break-and-enters and drunk driving. But officers were just as busy, as citizen-generated calls for police assistance increased and there was a whole new burden of responding to complaints of non-compliance with emergency orders and quarantine act violations.

Despite all its challenges, DRPS continues to have one of the best crime-solving records among similar police services. In fact, when the severity of crimes being solved is taken into account, we are proud to boast our performance ranked #2 in 2020.

This year's annual report documents a few of our highlights beyond the pandemic this year, including a record number of gun seizures, and an outstanding coordinated investigation into a particularly violent attack on a female jogger in Whitby. I also wish to give special recognition to our now retired Chief Paul Martin for his dedication to policing, and his leadership in developing plans for a more inclusive police service.

Finally, I wish to thank the Board for its continued support and leadership. I would also like to extend my gratitude to all of our community partners in public health, by-law enforcement, healthcare workers and other first responders. Working together, we continue to serve our community with dedication and excellence.

A Draft Action Plan to Enhance Confidence and Trust

In the Fall of 2020, the Board introduced a draft Action Plan to Enhance Trust and Confidence in Policing, with four key priorities: transparency in decision-making; improving diversity, equity and inclusion practices and procedures; strengthening the response to mental health calls; and supporting DRPS initiatives to address systemic barriers. The Board looks forward to receiving community input regarding the proposed priorities and actions intended to bring about lasting and meaningful change.

Farewell to Chief Paul Martin...

Chief Martin's career with the DRPS spanned 30 years and many administrative and operational roles. As Chief of Police, he prioritized better relations with the diverse communities of Durham Region and earned the trust and respect of community leaders for the organizational partnerships he initiated and nurtured. Many continuous improvement initiatives were implemented during his tenure, and his relentless focus on evidence-based decision-making will endure across the DRPS. The Board wishes Chief Martin health and happiness in his retirement. (See tribute page 7.)

...And Introducing Our New Interim Chief of Police and Interim Deputy Chief of Police

Chief Todd Rollauer was appointed to lead the DRPS on an interim basis in September 2020. He is respected as a collaborative and thoughtful leader, and has earned the confidence of the Board, the community and the membership. His knowledge and character will help position the Service for continued success. The Board also appointed Deputy Chief Joe Maiorano to his position on an interim basis in October 2020. Deputy Chief Maiorano has been a police officer with the DRPS for over 30 years, and has gained experience in a variety of leadership roles over this period. The Board is confident the strength and stability of the Command team will provide solid leadership during this transition period.

Strategic Plan Review

The Durham Regional Police Service 2020 Strategic Plan was developed following a comprehensive consultation process involving community stakeholders. The Strategic Plan reflects the input of thousands of Durham residents on how to improve public safety and policing services. The Plan is a guiding document that outlines the priorities of the community, and of the Durham Regional Police Service, and forms the basis for subsequent community safety plans for each of the five police divisions across the region.

The Plan has the following three objectives, and sets out actionable measures to achieve those goals and generally guide the delivery of police services in the region:

1. Deliver services and programs that inspire the trust of all communities

- Improve reported levels of satisfaction across the communities we serve
- Identify, prioritize and strengthen partnerships to support equity-seeking groups in the community
- Increase community participation in crime prevention by providing relevant and timely crime and safety information
- Attract a skilled workforce that reflects the diversity of the community
- Enhance police visibility to instil community confidence and reduce fear of crime

2. Provide efficient and effective evidence-based policing services

- Improve road safety by focusing enforcement on the most dangerous driving behaviours
- Prevent, investigate and solve criminal activity using intelligence, partnerships and data analysis
- Prevent re-offending
- Maintain cost-effective service through innovation and continuous improvement

3. Foster a positive organizational culture

- Support the physical and mental health and general well-being of members
- Ensure a respectful, bias-free and inclusive workplace
- Identify and resolve the barriers to effective internal communication
- Improve the transparency and clarity of member evaluation and development processes

Adapting During A Global Pandemic

The global pandemic brought much of the world to a standstill, but it didn't stop crime and crime didn't stop for COVID-19. Without interruption, the sworn and civilian members of the DRPS continued to perform their duties amid the complications and heightened stress of working through the pandemic.

Every unit had to adapt to how it served the community during the pandemic. When our service counters had to be closed to the public, staff found a way to ensure Durham residents could still report crimes, retrieve police records and otherwise get help from their police department. When police cruisers used by multiple officers suddenly became a potential health hazard, new systems and practices were put in place to ensure the vehicles were constantly being sanitized after each use. When masks and other personal protective equipment were suddenly in short supply across Canada, extraordinary efforts were made to secure PPE necessary to protect our members and the public.

DRPS developed an array of new policies and directives to help members deal with the pandemic — special staffing, sanitization, contact tracing and other measures. We also worked with our many partners including the Police Association, local by-law enforcement, public health authorities, municipalities and other first responders. The Durham community continued to be well served in 2020.

We are grateful to the Durham community for their collective efforts over the past year to respect the COVID-19 health restrictions, protecting themselves and their neighbours. Since the pandemic began, the overwhelming majority of Durham residents complied with health measures to protect the community from COVID-19 without enforcement.

Chief Paul Martin Retires

After more than six years of leading the DRPS, and an outstanding 30-year career in law enforcement, Chief Paul Martin retired on Sept. 11, 2020. He assumed the command in 2014 to bring about positive change, starting with the establishment of better relations with the diverse communities of Durham Region. In his term as Chief, he earned the trust and respect of community leaders for the organizational partnerships that he nurtured, while the collaborative approaches he instilled in the Service continue to enhance public confidence in policing across the region.

Amid the racial reckoning that followed George Floyd's death in the U.S., Chief Martin was one of the first Canadian police chiefs to acknowledge the likely existence of systemic racism in Canadian law enforcement agencies, just as it is a reality in our society in general. But he didn't stop there; he pledged meaningful action to address the issue as it affects the DRPS.

In collaboration with his Executive Leadership Team, Chief Martin set out a four-point plan to address systemic racism. It included:

1. Collection of race-based data beyond the requirements of the Ontario government;
2. Increased involvement of community members in recruitment processes and policy review;
3. Prioritizing equity and inclusion programs, such as specialized training in the duty to intervene;
4. Creating a demographic census for the organization to identify areas of concern and disparities in our work toward inclusion.

Continuous improvement was a key theme for Chief Martin. He initiated and drove a number of plans and programs that have strengthened internal efficiency and helped the DRPS to become a more responsive, innovative and community-oriented police service.

Mr. Kevin Ashe, former Chair of the Police Services Board, stated: "During Chief Martin's tenure as Chief of Police over the past six and half years, the DRPS has achieved many operational successes, and the organization is well-positioned to meet the community safety challenges in the years ahead. He has guided the Durham Regional Police through a period of significant change in policing and increased public expectations, and he should be proud of his leadership accomplishments."

Chief Martin also focused on connecting with youth and found inspiration in the Service's Youth in Policing Program. He provided mentorship to the program and often shared with young people his own childhood dream to be an officer.

Chief Martin said of his retirement: "I aspired to be a police officer since high school. To retire as chief of police of this outstanding police service is an immense privilege, but it is also difficult. However, the timing is right for myself and my family. I am honoured to have had this leadership opportunity, and I am so proud of the men and women of the DRPS who serve our community daily with courage, care, and integrity."

Addressing Systemic Racism

In 2020, DRPS furthered its commitment to creating a more equitable and inclusive police service. In addition to the Equity & Inclusion Strategic Plan that was released this year, DRPS also made a commitment to address racism, with a four-point plan to address systemic barriers.

- 1. Race-based data collection and analysis: The Province mandates the collection of race-based data solely for 'use of force' interactions. While this is important, it represents a small portion of the approximately 500,000 calls for service that we participate in each year. We have made the decision to expand the collection and analysis of race-based data, to other police-public interactions.
- 2. Community participation in interviews and policy review: Interested members of the community are participating in recruitment interviews and in policy review. It is important to open our doors and let the residents of this Region, whom we serve, see how we make decisions about who leads, who gets hired, and how we manage internal processes.
- 3. Anti-racism, anti-Black racism, duty to intervene training: Annually, we will ensure members complete equity and inclusion-related training programs, as part of our commitment to continuous learning and improvement.
- 4. Demographic census: We will launch an internal demographic census of the composition of our organization, in order to identify any areas of disproportionality and disparity, including in leadership, promotions, and career opportunities. We will ensure that we are practicing what we preach in becoming an equitable and inclusive organization.

Whitby Jogger Attack Shocks Community

On Wednesday, July 29, 2020 at approximately 10:25 a.m., officers found a seriously injured 50-year-old near a creek southeast of the intersection of Taunton Road East and Anderson Street in Whitby. She had multiple injuries consistent with a brutal assault while she was out jogging.

This horrific crime shocked the community that quickly came together to support the victim and her family.

DRPS immediately formed an investigative team and worked tirelessly to solve this violent crime. Members worked long shifts, and some even came to work on their days off to close the case as quickly as possible, and bring justice for the victim and relief to the community.

Investigators, along with members of the DRPS Auxiliary Unit, began to canvass the area for witnesses and other evidence. On Tuesday, August 4, police released security video of a "person of interest" in the case. As a result of the tireless work by our members, including our Electronic Crimes Unit, investigators were able to identify a suspect. With the assistance of the Ottawa Police Service, the suspect was arrested on August 13 without incident.

The suspect was not known to the victim, and police believe this was a random attack.

The community expressed their relief:

"Congratulations to you and your team and the excellent and tireless efforts...My wife and I were so happy to hear the news. Our thoughts and prayers go out to (the victim)... and we are grateful for you and your team for keeping us safe and protecting us."

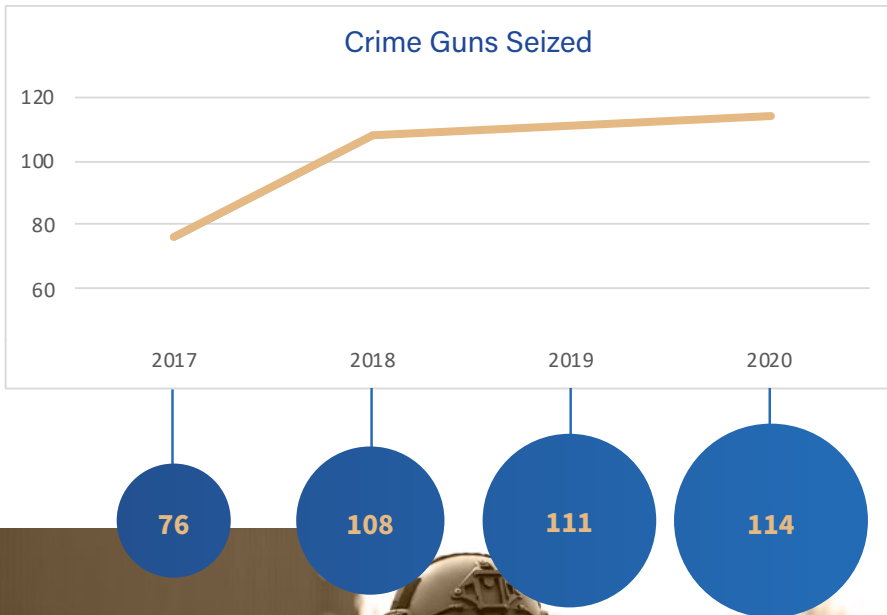

DRPS would like to thank all the community partners who helped us with this case including: the Centre of Forensic Sciences; EMS and Fire; doctors, nurses and hospital staff who cared for the victim; members of the DRPS including uniform, Auxiliary Unit and civilians, Intel Operations, Forensic Investigators and the Electronic Crimes Unit; and finally the Ottawa Police Service, the media and our community members.

Gun Seizures Continue to Increase

Durham police took a record 114 illegal guns off the streets of our community in 2020, a 50 per cent increase in just three years. Sixteen of those so-called “crime guns” were discovered and seized during routine traffic stops, a reminder once again that officers can never assume anything in their line of duty is really routine. A “crime gun” is any firearm that is unlawfully obtained, possessed or used in a crime, has an obliterated serial number, or has been otherwise modified to be a firearm.

Joint Forces Operations

Every year, a number of DRPS investigations involve working with police services across the province, nationally and even globally. Our members are embedded in a number of joint forces operations to share information with other police services, and federal and provincial authorities. These include the Provincial Asset Forfeiture Unit; the Provincial Biker Enforcement Unit; the Provincial Weapons Enforcement Unit; the Criminal Intelligence Service of Ontario; the Provincial Anti-Terrorism Section; the Integrated National Security Enforcement Team; the Combined Forces Special Enforcement Unit, and the Repeat Offender Parole Enforcement squad.

Roadway Safety

While there was less traffic on Durham roads in 2020 due to the pandemic, our officers nonetheless had to deal with a dramatic spike in dangerous driving behaviours on the relatively lightly travelled thoroughfares across the region — specifically, the number of speeding infractions increased by 25 per cent over the previous year, while charges for stunt driving increased by 68 per cent.

Impaired driving was down overall, no doubt in part due to pandemic stay-at-home orders and bans on parties and other social gatherings. Notably, the number of impaired driving charges involving drugs increased by 57 per cent compared to 2019. (Cannabis was involved in 30 per cent of cases where charges were laid, up from 18 per cent in 2019).

DRPS Traffic Services followed the Durham Vision Zero Strategy, a region-wide road safety strategy lead by DRPS and the Regional Municipality of Durham, by focusing enforcement initiatives on high-collision areas with high rates of personal injuries and fatal crashes. Enforcement teams targeted bad driving behaviors in these zones in an effort to reduce the number of accidents.

Fatal collisions on DRPS-controlled roadways decreased in 2020 to 18 (compared to 23 in 2019), and the overall number of accidents was down across the region. Similarly, there was also a 20-per-cent decrease in impaired driving violations — 663 compared to 828 in 2019. An effective R.I.D.E. campaign during the holiday season removed 72 impaired motorists from the roads.

The DRPS Marine Unit received a record number of calls as the pandemic triggered an increase in watercraft sales and traffic on the waterways.

Street Checks

A regulation in the Police Services Act, known as the Collection of Identifying Information in Certain Circumstances — also known as street checks — defines a police interaction and regulates how identifying information may be collected. In 2020, no street checks were conducted by Durham officers. Therefore, there were no public complaints, general information requests or personal record information requests made under the Municipal Freedom of Information and Privacy Act relating to information collected pursuant to the Regulation. There were no instances in which a police officer did not carry out their duty to inform the individual for the reasons outlined in Section 6 of the Regulation or where an individual was not given a receipt document because the individual did not indicate that he or she wanted it. As there were no attempted collections, there were no instances where an officer did not provide a receipt for any of the reasons prescribed in the Regulation. The restricted database was not accessed for any purpose in 2020.

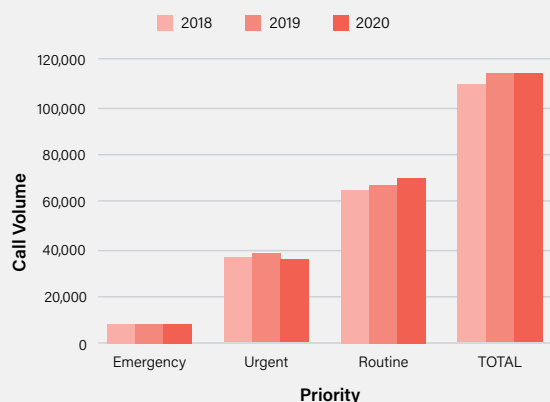

Use of Force

As of Jan. 1, 2020, the Ontario government implemented a standardized system of “use of force” reporting by all police services. In Durham last year, 256 out of 114,162 police calls met the threshold for mandatory reporting. This amounts to approximately 0.2 per cent of all calls (not including traffic stops and other undispached-officer contact with the public). This reflects the professional, strategic and purposeful manner in which our officers engage the members of our community on a daily basis, as well as their commitment to making the Region of Durham a safe community in which to live, work and play. It is also a testament to our rigorous officer training to use force as a last resort.

Calls for Service

Definition:

Citizen calls for service (excluding calls cancelled by dispatch and workload call types) region-wide over the past three years.

Oversight: SIU

The Special Investigations Unit (SIU) is the civilian oversight agency responsible for investigating circumstances involving police that have resulted in a death, serious injury, or allegations of sexual assault of a civilian. In 2020, the SIU invoked their mandate to investigate the police 10 times in Durham, compared to nine times in 2019. Three of those cases are pending, four were closed with no further action, and three were terminated and had no report filed with the Attorney General.

Public Complaints

In 2020, there were 148 public complaints filed with the Office of the Independent Police Review Director (OIPRD) related to the conduct, services, or policies of the DRPS compared to 118 filed in 2019. The OIPRD also directed the Service to investigate two additional conduct complaints involving members of York Regional Police and Belleville Police Service, for a total of 150.

Of the 148 public complaints involving DRPS officers, conduct, services or policies, 92 were addressed by the OIPRD as follows:

- 85 were screened out by the OIPRD
- Three were withdrawn before screening
- Two were put under investigations by the OIPRD. One was found to be unsubstantiated, and the other was still under investigation at the end of 2020.
- Two were assigned to third-party police services for investigations, where one was unsubstantiated, and the other was closed by informal resolution

The remaining 56 public complaints were assigned to DRPS PSU for investigation.

They have been resolved as follows:

- One was screened out by OIPRD after the Customer Service Resolution failed
- Two were resolved by Customer Service Resolution
- 10 were closed by Informal Resolution Agreement
- One was substantiated as misconduct
- 15 were deemed unsubstantiated
- 27 were withdrawn by the complainants (after mediation with PSU investigators)
